SECRETARY SEWARD ON THE RELATIONS BETWEEN ENGLAND AND AMERICA.—The New York correspondent of the London Spectator gives the substance of some remarks recently made by Mr Seward in the writer's hearing. As to the relations of the two Governments he said that they were on a footing of formal amity but nothing more. Sir Frederick Bruce has expressed the wish that a feeling of frank cordiality might be established between the two Governments and the two peoples. Mr Seward wished that it might be so with all his heart and he would do as indeed he always had done, all that could be done to bring about so desirable an end. As to war that was a horrible alternative the responsibility for which he, so far as he was able, should take care did not rest with our Government. This he had said privately to Sir Frederick Bruce, with whom his relations were of the pleasantest kind and of whom he spoke with respect and cordiality. But he had also told the British Minister that the way towards anything more than the present relations of mere formal amity between the two peoples and the two governments must be led by the British people and the British Government. If they were content with our present attitude toward each other we were, but that if any change were made in it for the better, it must be of British making. We were the aggrieved party, who had suffered insult for many years, and grievous wrong added to graver insult for the last four years, and it was not for us to seek a reconciliation. While the British Government thought it proper to reply to our representations of the injury we had suffered through its neglect of British subjects by merely talking to us about being the guardians of their own honor nothing could be expected from us but to stand upon punctilio as in the minutest particular. If our elder brother wished us to trust him again, he must bring forth fruits meet for repentance. We should be pleased if he did; we should be content if he did not. However he [Mr Seward] might personally be disposed to conciliate the British people, this was as far as the people of this country would allow any administration to go in that direction.

TIN MINING IN THE UNITED STATES.—The New York Mining Index says: The great advantage of having our own tin mines has long been seen by statesmen of this country, and in order to encourage miners to explore for the ores of that useful metal, a Congressional Act was long since passed offering large rewards to the person or persons first finding them in any workable quantity. We have just learned through exchanges that tin ore, supposed to be stream tin, has been discovered in the Territory of Idaho—as will be seen elsewhere in this week's mining summary. The discoverers it is stated, intend to send the ore to Professor Silliman for his opinion thereon, although portions had already been tested by an experienced assayer in that Territory, who pronounced it "stream tin." If this be so, the discoverers intend to apply for the reward offered by Congress, and they should get it. Stream tin is the alluvial debris of the veins which has been separated from the gravel by washing, so that wherever found, in close proximity must be tin ore. In the low grounds of Cornwall this stream tin is frequently met, and it is in Cornwall that the principal tin mines in the world are worked. The importance of the discovery of tin in this country may be imagined, when we state that the annual yield of tin from the mines of Great Britain is set down at $3,750,000. But its value by no means ends there. When made up into articles of commerce it probably represents $20,000,000 per annum. It is stated that in the article of the plates alone, $1 380,000 are yearly made there, out of $380,500 worth of tin. That tin mines, even in far off Idaho—where labor is so high—can be worked profitably we have no doubt. The prevailing scarcity of the metal and consequent rise that has recently taken place—as also in the case of copper, which has risen because of the Spanish blockade of Chilean ports—will make capitalists only the more eager to invest in such mines. We shall look with interest for future information as to this great tin discovery.

THE REGULATOR OF DEMOCRATIC STRENGTH.—"I have been home to vote" writes a Wisconsin loyal Democrat, to a friend in New England; "the going was so bad we had to go round by railroad one hundred and forty miles to get fifty-two. We carried the day by fourteen majority, the Copperheads have carried it heretofore by about thirty five votes. They were greatly mortified by their defeat. If you will study the elections, you will invariably find that Democratic majorities are ruled by the price of whisky, for instance, when four hundred was the Democratic majority in Iowa county, whisky was then eighteen cents per gallon. Whisky went up to seventy five cents per gallon and the Democrats lost the register of deeds, sheriff, and clerk of the board of county commissioners. Whisky advanced to one dollar and fifty cents, and the Republicans carried the county by three hundred majority, and have held it ever since under the high price of whisky. Now it is two dollars and fifty cents, and the Democratic leaders cannot afford to treat as formerly. We have carried the State by about ten thousand majority and left a miserable set of traitors out in the cold for two years more."

ABOUT RAVENS.—The raven possesses the power of imitating the human voice, and if not so voluble as the parrot, enunciates his sentences with tenfold the gravity of poll. A raven's corpse was once followed by a greater crowd than ever escorted the funeral of any one of Rome's distinguished sons. This honored bird was born on the top of the Temple of Castor, but took up his abode in the shoemaker's shop opposite. Crispin took great pains in educating his black lodger, and his pains were well bestowed. Every morning the raven used to fly to the Rostra, and salute in turn Tiberius and his nephews, and having thus testified his loyalty, amused himself in changing greetings with the populace. For several years the bird continued to delight the idlers of Rome, until a jealous brother of his landlord's craft killed him in a fit of anger. The mob rose as one man, drove the man out of the city and then executed him.

The body of the popular bird was then placed on a litter and borne to the pile, amid the laments of Rome, and his ashes deposited in a field on the right hand side of the Appian Way.

NEGRO DOCTORING.—A gentleman in Alabama, in exerting himself one day felt a sudden pain, and fearing his internal machinery had been thrown out of gear sent for a negro on his plantation, who made some pretensions to medical skill, to prescribe for him. The negro having investigated the cause, prepared and administered a dose to his patient with the utmost confidence of a speedy cure. No relief being experienced, however the gentleman sent for a physician, who, on arriving, inquired of the negro what medicine he had given his master. Bob promptly responded "Rosin and alum sir!" "What did you give them for?" continued the doctor. "Why," replied Bob, "de alum to draw de parts togedder, and de rosin to sodder um." The patient eventually recovered.—Charleston Courier.

DEATH OF A SON OF ROBERT BURNS.—Lieutenant Colonel James Glencairn Burns the youngest son of Robert Burns, Scottish poet, died at Cheltenham England on Saturday November 18th. Although not inheriting any of the poetic genius of his father he was an agreeable and accomplished man naturally proud of the name he bore, and which carried with it a happy prestige wherever he went. During later years he resided chiefly at Cheltenham, but he paid occasional visits to Scotland, and was held in much esteem by intimate friends in Dumfries Edinburg and Glasgow. The poet Burns died in 1796, and the living links which connect him with the present generation are becoming fewer every year. Colonel Burns had no recollection of his father, he being a mere infant when the poet died.

During the cholera panic at Toulon, a lady of the ancient French nobility had guns placed at the entrance of her chateau, and threatened to have them fired at any one—even if a near relative—who should visit her without having undergone a process of fumigation in a sort of quarantine which she had established hard by.

The last dog story is from Hollidaysburgh Pennsylvania, where a farmer's dog has been detected in going to the hog pen at night and biting one of the hogs till he gets up, when "Tiger" lies down in the warm place and goes to sleep.

A MYSTERY CLEARED UP.—No wonder that ghosts enter rooms though the doors are locked. They are all provided with skeleton keys.

ANECDOTE OF JUDGE COLLAMER.—An Eastern correspondent tells the following good story about the late United States Senator Collamer of Vermont.

At the beginning of Taylor's (or Fillmore's—I won't be sure which) administration, Judge Collamer was appointed Postmaster General. On the very day of his taking office there was shown in to him among other visitors a French Creole from Louisiana. "Good morning, Monsieur Collamore. My name is Jean Jacques Trousee, of Plaquemines Parish, and I come for the Postoffice at New Orleans." The Judge listened to him with dignified attention, and then remarked that, as he must be aware, affairs of the Department were as yet in confusion, and nothing could then be done in the way of appointments. He advised Trousee to write an application for the desired office, forward it in the regular channel, and call again in a week. Trousee retired somewhat chagrined that the announcement of his identity had not secured him a more cordial reception. In precisely a week he again entered the Postmaster-General's office. That official greeted him as a stranger whereupon—"Ah, you not know me, Monsieur. I am Jean Jacques Trousee, from Plaquemines, and I want the Post Office at New Orleans. I see you one week ago and you tell me to make my application and call in one week, I have make my application and I come again." Judge Collamer repeated his previous remarks and urged him to come again in a fortnight. At the end of that time he made his third call and again unrecognized by the Judge announced his name and his object. The Judge reminded him of the unavoidable delays in the bestowal of offices, hinted at the expense of staying in Washington, and told Trousee he had better go home and await the result of his application. But the office seeker objected, preferring to see the thing out, so the Judge told him to call again in two weeks. At the appointed time Trousee appeared again, and again had to make himself known, this time with ill-concealed wrath. When the Judge discovered who his visitor was, he said he was sorry to inform Monsieur Trousee that the New Orleans Post office had been disposed of just two weeks ago. When he had finished this communication the other began: "Monsieur Collamer, I had a nice little girl at New Orleans; her name was Mademoiselle Josephine. I loved her very much. But one evening I went to see her and when I came away Mademoiselle Josephine say to me "My dear Jean Jacques, I love you very much, but Antoine Briest he has more money than you—so you must not come here any more." Now, Monsieur Collamere, what you s'pose I say to Mademoiselle Josephine eh? I turn round and I say to Mademoiselle Josephine, 'Go to halle, Mademoiselle Josephine, go to haile!' And so, Monsieur Collamere, I say to you—Go to haile, Monsieur Collamere; go to haile, Monsieur!" And Jean Jacques Trousee shook off the dust from his feet and departed.

THE TAILOR AND DEAN SWIFT.—A tailor in Dublin, near the residence of the Dean, took it into his head that he was specially and divinely inspired to interpret the prophecies, and especially the "book of Revelation." Quitting the shopboard, he turned out a preacher, or rather a prophet, until his [illegible] had left his shop, and his family was likely to famish.

His monomania was well known to Dean Swift, who benevolently watched for some convenient opportunity to turn the current of his thoughts. One night the tailor, as he fancied, got a revelation to go and convert Dean Swift, and the next morning took up his line of march for the deanery. The Dean, whose study was furnished with a glass door, saw the tailor approach, and instantly surmised the nature of his errand. Throwing himself in an attitude of solemnity, and his eyes fixed on the tenth chapter of Revelation, he waited his approach.

The door opened, and the tailor announced, in an unearthly voice, the message:

"Dean Swift, I am sent by the Almighty to announce to you—"

"Come in, my friend," said the Dean, "I am in great trouble, and no doubt the Lord has sent you to help me out of my difficulty."

This unexpected welcome inspired the tailor, strengthened greatly his assurance in his own prophetic character, and disposed him to listen to the disclosure.

"My friend," said the Dean, "I have just been reading the tenth chapter of Revelation, and am greatly distressed at a difficulty I have met with; and you are the very man to help me out. Here is the account of an angel that came down from heaven, who was so large that he placed one foot on the sea, and the other on the earth, and lifted up his hands to heaven. Now my knowledge of mathematics," continued the Dean, "enables me to calculate exactly the size and form of the angel; but I am in great difficulty, for I wish to ascertain how much cloth it will take to make a pair of breeches, and as that is in your line of business, I have no doubt the Lord has sent you to show me."

This sudden exposition came like an electric shock to the poor tailor. He rushed from the house, ran to his shop, and a quick revulsion of thought and feeling came over him. Making breeches was exactly in his line of business. He returned to his occupation, thoroughly cured of his prophetical revelation by the wit of the dean.

The word "grocer" was originally used, as the term implies, to designate a wholesale dealer; the word "stationer" was employed to distinguish a resident shopkeeper from an itinerant trader, and the word "milliner," because the articles she dealt in then mostly came from Milan.

A young author reading a tragedy, perceived his auditor very often pull off his hat at the end of a line, and asked him the reason. "I cannot pass a very old acquaintance," replied the critic, "without that civility."

Maximilian's Atrocities

The execution of the inhuman decree of Maximilian, condemning to death every Republican soldier of Mexico who may be taken prisoner in war, compels the Liberals to have recourse to that terrible measure, retaliation. Several of the most distinguished officers, and a large number of privates belonging to the Republican army have been cruelly hanged or shot under the order of the foreign despot who rules in Mexico. In self defence and to protect the Mexican people from this inhuman slaughter, the Liberal Government now commences decisive action. Three of Maximilian's officers have already been executed by General Cortinas, and it is announced that unless the brutal decree of the so called Emperor is revoked, all officers and soldiers of his army who fall into the hands of the Liberals will be put to death. In view of the fact that this horrid butchery was commenced by the foreign intruder who has established himself in Mexico for the purpose of building up a despotic Government on the grave of popular liberty, the world cannot but justify the Liberals in their resolve to protect themselves even by the use of so fearful a weapon as retaliation.

Since the 15th of November last, every soldier of the Republic who has been captured by the subordinates of Maximilian, has suffered death. The order for the execution of prisoners is always carried into effect by the Imperialists within twenty-four hours after their capture. Any person who still adheres to Juarez, even in his sympathies, is liable to shot by any sub-lieutenant from Austria who desires to show Imperial zeal. In order to make the punishment more rigid, all are to suffer who assist the Liberals with money, or who give them "advice or information," who sell them arms, horses or food, who hold any relations with them; who conceal them, who make reports calculated to disturb the peace, or who hear of their whereabouts and refuse to give information. As if to make this butchery as general and as frightful as possible, the sentence of death in all cases to be executed by the officer who makes the arrest. Under this murderous system, none who are suspected and apprehended, can have the smallest chance for escape. Stimulated by the hope of gaining favor of the Emperor, his willing instruments will execute his bloody decree with an alacrity which is always manifested by those who think it a privilege to do the bidding of royalty.

This is not war—it is murder. Had Juarez, the legitimately elected President of Mexico, been the first to issue such an order, he would have incurred the reproaches of the civilized world. Here is a people who are fighting against foreign aggression for their homes, for their country, for self-government. The intruder and usurper, not satisfied merely with the bloody work of war, tries to exterminate a people whose only offence is their attachment to their country and their hatred of foreign oppression. Against the unjust war which Maximilian is waging on an inoffensive people, the world ought to protest. To prevent its continuance the United States should interfere. Against the assassination of prisoners of war by the mercenaries of a foreign despot, something more emphatic than a verbal protest is needed—something more is wanted than mere talk of interposition.

Maximilian went to Mexico promising peace to the country and freedom to the people. The civilization he promised to introduce consists of peonage, and the liberty he boasted of so grandly is a military despotism. The disorders of the country, great as they were before he reached it, have since been immeasurably aggravated. There will be no peace for that unhappy country until this interloping Archduke with his mercenary troops, shall have been driven from it. Such outrages as are there perpetrated under the sanction of usurped authority, are quite sufficient to startle humanity, and might well afford the world a reason for declaring that such practices must cease.

A VAIN EFFORT.—It is bruited that the "Democracy" of this State are intending to make an effort to get rid of O'Meara, and thus prepare the way for the release of the party from the rule of the uncompromising and intractable secessionists. Considering that O'Meara's followers, augmented as their numbers have been by the "gallant Confederates" who came to this State last year, constitute a very large majority of the "Democratic" party, it would be rare sport to see an attempt made to thrust him and them beyond the pale of the organization. The "Democratic" party is fully under the control of the majority which it is proposed thus to excommunicate. To try to drive them out is nothing less than rebellion. If the attempt is made, they who rebel against O'Meara's authority will be whipped ignominiously into submission, and driven back, degraded, to do the service of their master. Talk about cutting O'Meara off lest his counsels may rend the "Democratic" party! Let those who have this scheme in view beware lest he rend them. Circe had not more complete control of the unfortunates who were metamorphosed by magic into other shapes and held by her in absolute subjection, than O'Meara has of those discontented "Democrats" who are reported to be chafing in the thralls in which they are bound. Even if they could get rid of him, they could not get on without him. Deprived of him, the intellect and character of the party are gone.

The Tribune says: The reception of General Grant at Savannah seems to have been rather a tame affair. Says the Republican in concluding a description of it: "Thus ended the tame event of the season—the visit of Lieut. Gen. U. S. Grant to the commercial emporium of Georgia. We never remember witnessing so cold, inanimate and cheerless a reception as was tendered the great military hero of the age, and we were led to exclaim, Sic transit gloria mundi."

OF COURSE.—In a eulogistic notice of R. E. Lee and his academy at Lexington (Va.), a Copperhead paper says that Gen. Lee was the greatest General of the war. We have no doubt every secession newspaper and every Copperhead in the country will say the same thing. If the same journals and the same men had existed in the times of the Revolution they would have called Benedict Arnold a patriot.

INDIANS VS. BLOODHOUNDS.—The people of Minnesota have long been troubled by the depredations of hostile Indians. As the savages could not be punished by the ordinary modes of warfare a pack of bloodhounds was brought from the South to track and kill them. It was most excellent sport for the Indians, who shot the fierce canines and ate them up at a grand pow wow.

The Stockton (Cal.) Independent says: "There are indications that Oregon will take away all the travel from this State (via Salt Lake) to Montana."

The Hon. Oakes Ames, M. C., of Massachusetts, is said to be the wealthiest man in Congress.

The Post says: The loan market is easy and rapid at 5 per cent. Money is abundant. The banks have a superfluity of capital, but general confidence is wanting. The stock market is irregular. 5 20's are lower in consequence of an anticipated falling off in the European demand. 7 30's are firm, without much activity.

The Times' Brownsville correspondent says Cortinas now occupies Bagdad with about 200 men. Davis of Kentucky moved to strike out the provision extending military jurisdiction and protection to the agents and employees of the Bureau. Rejected—ayes, 8, noes 11. An amendment was adopted restricting the military jurisdiction to the exercise of the functions pertaining to the Bureau. Several other amendments were offered and rejected. Johnson and Col. Dougherty, are all prominently spoken of as candidates for the United States Senate.

Columbia Marine Insurance Company.

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—The following announcement is made by H. D. Phelps, agent of the Columbia Marine Insurance Company: "The board of directors of the Columbia Marine Insurance Company, in consequence of several unprecedented losses last year, particularly during a recent period, have decided to close up the affairs of the company. They find themselves possessed of a large amount of assets sufficient to meet all liabilities and leave a handsome surplus." It was stated on the street that the liabilities of the company would reach at least $6,000,000. Many risks have been lost through the depredations of the pirate Shenandoah. The losses arising from this source aggregate over $1,000,000.

An Infernal Machine.

CHICAGO, Jan. 23.—A Washington correspondent of the Detroit Tribune gives a different version of the story of Judge Holt and the infernal machine. He says the Judge received a package carefully done up about the size and like an ordinary ambrotype case. He proceeded to undo it supposing it to be a picture. In undoing it he noticed that it opened very hard. Just then a suspicion flashed across his mind that there might be something wrong about it and he threw the package against the wall. In striking it broke open and disclosed an ingeniously constructed machine. The package contained several conical balls made somewhat like fixed ammunition for the Spencer rifle but so arranged as to be discharged by the application of fire. The construction of the infernal machine was such that when opened, a match would be ignited on a piece of prepared cardboard and communicating fire to the ammunition scatter death in every direction.

General News.

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—An evening paper announces the appearance of a new counterfeit 100 dollar national currency note. It is well executed.

A letter from St. Petersburg announces that the Russian Government has placed a war steamer at the disposal of the Collins Overland Telegraph Co., and has given instruction to the Russian authorities to afford every possible assistance to the company in their operations.

A letter from Richmond says that throughout the whole State of Virginia meetings have been held for the purpose of fixing the price of labor. In many instances the people have been liberal, while in others they have agreed on a price which will be ruinous to the working class, and productive of trouble in the future.

A Washington dispatch says: Notwithstanding his message urging the abolishment of the Freedmen's Bureau, Gov. Worth of North Carolina made application to the Superintendent at Fayetteville to intervene in the affairs of his daughter living in Harlam county, and direct a settlement with her negroes who have been employed during the past season, neither party being able to come to terms.

"WATERFALLS" AND DEAD HEADS.—Ladies who wear "waterfalls"—and there are but few who do not—are not aware perhaps, that they are carrying about some dead woman's hair. A pleasant writer in the London Review gives an account of the sources of false hair from which the artificial curls and "waterfalls" of the present fashion creates a market. Hair merchants, by long experience, have acquired great proficiency in judging of the nationality of this article. One of the largest dealers in the trade in England declares that he could tell in the dark the nationality of any piece of hair. This is done either by the sense of touch or smell. Some nations have much coarser hair than others, indeed there is a constant difference both with respect to length and weight. But there is still another kind of hair about which there is a deep mystery. This is known as the church yard hair. Sometimes this class of hair comes to market with pieces of scalp skin at the end. How this hair is obtained is a mystery which the trade does not care to fathom. When we hear so often of the desecration of church yards, and the shoveling away of the old bones and decayed coffins we may perhaps make a shrewd guess at the source from whence the hair comes. It must be remembered that hair is almost indestructible. The beautiful wig of auburn hair now in the British Museum had lain in the tomb of a Theban mummy for upwards of two thousand years before it found its way to the national collection, yet that hair is as fresh as though it had just come from the hands of the hair dresser, and the curl so strong in it that it cannot be taken out even by the application of heat. Church yard hair is brought into the market by home as well as foreign collectors, and we cannot help suspecting that the grave digger is no mean member of the craft.

The celebrated Maine sculptor, Simmonds has received an order for a colossal statue of President Lincoln for Philadelphia. It is to cost $30,000.

DIED.

D[illegible] in East Willamette, near Oregon City, the 2d of January, Granville B. Daily, aged 21 years and [illegible] the Isle of Wise, where his parents reside. The deceased, although so young, was a veteran soldier and was with Sherman on his March to the Sea. Though but a short time in Oregon City he had endeared himself to a large circle of acquaintances, who mourn his loss as if no common ties were sundered.

As man may, he fought his fight,
Proved his truth by his endeavor;
Let him sleep in solemn night,
Sleep forever and forever.

Leave him to God's watching eye,
Trust him to the Hand that made him,
Mortal love weeps idly by,
God alone has power to aid him.

Subscriber's Meeting.—The subscribers to the Montana Road fund are requested to meet at the rooms of the Portland Stock and Exchange Board this afternoon at 1 o'clock. By request of January 30th 1866. COMMITTEE.

Who will Befriend the Widow and the Orphan? The following communication explains itself and commends itself at once to the public of this city. We should like very much to see something done as suggested by a Front street merchant. We have not the least doubt but that our people would respond handsomely. Mr Crandall was greatly respected by all who knew him, and his bereaved wife and children should not be allowed to suffer from want:

Portland, Oregon, January 29th, 1866.

Dear Sir:—In looking over the San Francisco Alta of a late date, I find the following communication in its columns, and as Mr Crandall was well known to the [illegible] community of this city, and much respected by all who knew him, I think we should do something for his poor widow and suffering children. We have a considerable amount of musical talent in this city, and if an effort is made, an amateur concert might be given from which at least $500 could be realized. If this is not feasible, then let us have a ball, a lecture, a subscription or something by which we can help the poor little orphans of our late fellow townsman. I append the communication referred to and remain yours very truly,

A Front Street Merchant.

The writer of the following communication is known as a man of veracity, and the statements made by him are undoubtedly correct in all the important particulars:

Editors Alta:—Knowing the interest you have often taken in cases of destitute persons, I would call your attention to the case of the family of Dwight Crandall, who was lost on the Brother Jonathan, on his way to Portland. He had just invested all he was worth in goods which were aboard that steamer.

He leaves a wife and four children, who are absolutely destitute, and were it not for the generosity of Mr Weygant, of the International Hotel, would be now suffering for food and shelter, he having for some time provided them with both without charge.

Mrs. Crandall applied to the San Francisco Benevolent Society for aid, was refused because she has a father in this State, which is true but he is absolutely unable to assist her. Is she and are her children to starve because her father is a man of no means? The scarlet fever prevails at present at the Home of the Ladies Protection and Relief Society, else the children might be placed there.

Mr. Crandall was for two years Senator from Apache county, and for a long time employed in the Custom House in this city.

Birth-Day Festival.—At the solicitation of our German fellow citizen, Dr Chas Blach, we attended on the occasion of his birth-day fete at Music Hall on the evening of the 28th. The Doctor, as correspondent for some of the papers of the country, published in the German language, seems allied to us, and in attending on this [illegible] it was [illegible] much to observe the friendship [illegible] for him between the representatives of the various parts of the German Confederation resident here. The prominent element of the German character—their love of music—was the chief feature of the evening. There, [illegible] at times, we listened to the sweet notes of the zither, that national instrument of the Swiss, so seldom [illegible] in America, which, with the Guitar, Violin, and other instruments, combined to show us the high rank [illegible] by the Germans in the science of music. There is no question but that as a class the Germans are proficient in this respect, and their rank is admitted as of the [illegible]. In point of fact, taking history [illegible] there is not a single branch of science in which [illegible] have not excelled. They have largely promoted the growth of human knowledge, and they are highly [illegible] adopted citizens of our land, yet Americans are [illegible] at regarding them. In listening to the toasts [illegible] on the occasion, we were only able to be [illegible] about them through the aid of an interpreter, [illegible] impressed to us that while our high schools [illegible] the languages, it might be as useful to the [illegible] to give him a knowledge of the German language as well as that of French, Greek, or Latin. The German immigration to America in past years, and as it is expected in future—will give us a large element of this class of people, and while they are fond of liberty—although not classed as being particularly national in their character—what must we expect other than that they should become attached to us, to the form of our government and be as loyal and law-abiding people as [illegible] even better than thousands who are to the manor born! And should we not learn to better know [illegible]. In this city there is a large German element, and [illegible] societies the Turner Ring Verein, the Portland [illegible] and others serve to keep them united [illegible] they live long to enjoy the free air of their adopted country.

Fat Cattle, Swine and Sheep.—United States Assessor [illegible] has furnished us with the following statement showing the number of animals slaughtered in the District of Oregon, as per returns to the Assessor for the [illegible] year of 1865. The report will be found interesting [illegible] figures in which the farmer especially can take an interest. It will be seen that while 10,522 cattle and calves, and 13,828 sheep have been slaughtered, but 7,106 hogs have been killed. The prices paid for swine in all the markets, are generally much above the prices paid for cattle and sheep, yet there are fewer killed. We often hear a farmer say that he has more of some certain kinds of produce than he can conveniently get rid of, which, if he would [illegible] the difference made in feeding [illegible] would bring him a good profit in pork [illegible] and bacon, besides increasing and enriching the farm. There is a profit in fattening hogs. We observed recently in an Eastern paper, a statement showing in [illegible] these profits. A man had two barrow pigs, born in May. He fed them on nothing during the summer but the sour milk from his cow, the swill of his small family, and weeds from his garden. On the first of September they were lank, long, and weasel-shaped; he then bought twelve bushels of old dry corn and had it [illegible], giving them all the hasty pudding they would eat up clean three times a day, always warmed, and with nothing but the sour milk of the cow and house swill. The result was that the two pigs when slaughtered, on the first of December, weighed 600 pounds; the cost of the corn was but six dollars. The expense [illegible] the fattening of hogs is in accordance with the [illegible] of feeding them. Nearly one half of all the raw [illegible] fed to fattening hogs in the usual way is either [illegible] or lost, and the animal has a continual craving for more. By proper care and attention the farmer would reap as much profit, or more, from fattening hogs and curing the meat, as in any other branch of his business. The following is the statement of A[illegible] Frazar's [illegible]:

The Public Schools.—The January term of the Public schools commenced yesterday, under very favorable [illegible]. The Schools are under the superintendence of [illegible] C. [illegible] Mr. P. K. Warren Principal of the Harrison street school. There were in attendance at the Central school, in the Grammar department, 94 scholars; intermediate, 60; primary, 102. Harrison street school, in the aggregate, 160—total number 416 [illegible]. It is thought more than probable that one hundred in addition to the above, will be in attendance next week. With this large number, notwithstanding the erection of the new building, which is not only an [illegible] to the city but creditable to the foresight of the directors, more room is even now necessary for the school. An addition to the central building should be immediately decided upon, and plans devised for the construction of a building in the First Ward larger than that of the Third Ward.

Opposition.—The boats of the rival Companies left this city yesterday on time, and made a sharp contest of speed to Oregon City, the merits of which were loudly discussed by the passengers last evening. The engines of the Alert—belonging to the W. S. N. Company—are of considerable more power than those of the Senator, of the P. T. Company, and the boat is also some larger, but the Senator gives her a good chase. Capt Streng informs us that the Active connected with the Alert and proceeded up the Willamette.

Police Court.—H. Wagner, arraigned yesterday before Justice Hoffman on a charge of keeping a hurdy gurdy house, was discharged.—B. Smith, found drunk on the sidewalk, was sent to jail for two days. L. Rosenthal, arrested for larceny, was discharged. Several cases were entered for trial to-day.

Montana Road Fund.—Subscribers to the above fund are requested to meet this afternoon at 1 o'clock, at the rooms of the Portland Stock and Exchange Board.

Lecture.—Our readers will bear in mind the lecture at the M. E. Church this evening by Rev B. C. Lippencott. Subject, "The True Man."

The steamer Oregon left San Francisco on the 25th, giving her full time, and she should arrive here to-day.

The steamer Cascade left yesterday for a trip up the Columbia river, but had not returned at 12 o'clock last night.

A great many German emigrants are reaching St. Louis, Mo., direct from Europe, by the way of New Orleans. Shiploads of them are landed at the former city daily. Missouri is being rapidly filled up with this kind of population the most valuable and useful that is thrown upon our shores.

Four of the Tennessee members of Congress are secessionists and five are Union men. The admission of the latter to the seats they claim would necessitate the admission of the former also. This, if nothing else, is a good reason why Congress should refuse their petition.

General William S. Smith, late of Buffalo, is engaged in writing a life of Lieutenant-General Grant. He is said to be a vigorous writer, possessing literary talents of a high order.

The Wilmington Journal gives us the consoling [illegible], that though the gallant Fourteenth Regiment of Infantry passed through that town, on the way to Arizona, the citizens did not lose any hot stoves.

The great German philologist, Grimm, said of the English language—"It possesses a veritable power of expression such as, perhaps, never stood at the command of any other language of man."

Making Light of It.—The San Francisco papers complain that inasmuch as the contract of the gas company with the city requires the former to keep the streets lighted "during the dark nights of the moon," that corporation consults the almanac alone, instead of the weather and in cloudy and stormy nights when it is time for Luna to be "up and dressed," prepared to receive company, the street lamp lighter douses the glim, leaving the city in total darkness. The Alta reporter, who has to "homeward plod his way," through a part of the city which was a popular poaching ground with the late "Bloody Fourteenth," gives the following opinion of the gas company "hiding their light under a bushel:"

"It happens, however that at this season of the year moonlight, like white man is 'mighty uncertain,' and 'pale Luna' has a trick of being snuffed out by a passing rain cloud without even a moment's warning. This fact is, however not taken into consideration by the gas company, and prompt at the minute when the moon should rise, according to the contract out go the street lamps, even though it were raining pitchforks with the tines downward, leaving belated citizens to stumble around in total darkness, at the risk of being drowned or having their necks broken, and the burglar and jayhawker to pursue their avocations undisturbed. This was the case on Sunday night or, more properly, Monday morning when the over-attentive lamp extinguisher shut off the gas in the midst of a pouring rain storm and left the city in total darkness, while the burglars, who had been waiting for just such an opportunity came forth and went to work with marked success, as subsequent investigations by the police prove, in different parts of the city. This thing should be remedied in some manner."

Notes on the Gold Fields of the South.—The gold belt extends from Central Georgia to Alexandria, Virginia. The auriferous veins are very numerous, being generally narrow and pockety contact veins, decomposed near the surface, and with free gold near the water level. Below, the gold is found united with the sulphurets of iron, copper, zinc and lead. Owing to bad mining, expense of pumping water, and the difficulty of separating the gold from the sulphurets the greatest number of mines have been abandoned at the water level, though the ore is apparently richer than above. It is impossible to obtain a definite and correct idea of the value or extent of the mines, none having been worked during the war, consequently all are now in a ruinous condition, thus preventing interior examination while the soil and the debris is generally so thick that a superficial one is very unsatisfactory. The owners and neighbors—as usual in all mining districts in which there are abandoned mines—speak in the most extravagant terms of the ruinous mines. Unfortunately there is no evidence as to the value of mines here, except hearsay. This is always unreliable in mining matters. It is evident, however, that hundreds of mines have been worked, and some very extensively, and with apparent profit, or, at least, were self-sustaining, as the owners were men of limited means. The mode of running mining machinery, system of reducing the ores and extracting the gold were very rude and imperfect. It is, therefore, evident that mines that can be made self-sustaining under such disadvantage must leave a large profit if properly worked, with the latest improvements in mining and milling machinery.

Freedmen's Relief Association in Germany.—The following passage is from the Berlin correspondent of the London Times:

"An exchange of international courtesies has been latterly going on between this country and the United States. At Bremen, Berlin and Hamburg committees are forming in aid of the Freedmen's Relief Association at New York. I do not think that this is a very favorable time for raising subscriptions in Germany, as the people, having largely contributed for public purposes during the last few years, without, however, securing the liberal and popular ends in view, are both disinclined to give and discouraged as to their power to effect anything by private exertions. Still the German sympathy with the slaves is great, and so will be the number, though, perhaps not the aggregate amount of the mites contributed. As a reciprocal compliment, the Americans residing at Berlin contemplate opening a subscription for the benefit of Herr von Schimmel-Pfennig, the aged father of the late United States General. A few days ago the old gentleman, who lives in a Berlin suburb, and, as an officer of the campaign of 1815, is in the receipt of a county pension of government, received a visit of condolence from Mr. Wright, the American Minister here. Perhaps I may be rendering a service to some of your military readers by mentioning that Captain Sander of the Royal Prussian Artillery has just published a history of the American war, as viewed in the light of European strategy. The second volume of the History of the United States, by Professor Nueman, a unique work of the kind, and equally remarkable for comprehensiveness and lucidity, is just out."

Singular Mirage.—A correspondent of the Reese River Reveille thus describes a remarkable mirage:

When traveling down Reese River Valley from Big Tree to Austin, yesterday morning, my attention was attracted by the singular appearance of the Humboldt mountains, which may be seen at the lower end of the valley. They presented the most beautiful mirage I have ever seen. A massive cloud hung over the mountains, to which an illusory range, inverted, was clinging, and resting on the top of the real range. As the cloud rose the two ranges were separated, in several places forming the mirage into gigantic pillars resting on the substantial mountains, and surmounted by a capital composed of the base of the illusory range, which seemed now to penetrate the very heavens. The mountains were covered with snow, and as the sun's rays darted obliquely from under the cloud and fell upon the white mass, they imparted to the surrounding surface a transparent crystaline appearance, beautiful to the last degree.

The Wind as a Musician.—The wind is a musician by birth. We extend a silken thread in the crevice of a window, and the wind finds it and sings over it, and goes up and down the scale upon it, and Paganini must go somewhere else for honour, for lo! the wind is performing upon a single string. It tries almost everything on earth to see if there is music in it, it persuades a tune out of the great bell in the tower, when the sexton is at home asleep; it makes a mournful harp of the giant pines, and it does not disdain to try what sort of a whistle can be made out of the humblest chimney in the world. How it will play upon a tree, until every leaf on it thrills with a note, while a river runs at its base in a sort of murmuring accompaniment! And what a melody it sings when it gives a concert with a full choir of the waves of the sea, and perform an anthem between the two worlds that goes up, perhaps, to the stars, which love music most and sing it first! Then, how fondly it haunts old houses, moaning under the eaves and sighing in the halls, opening doors without fingers, and singing a measure of some old sad song around the fireless and deserted hearths!

The Empress Charlotte.—The Empress Charlotte made her recent entree into the city of Vera Cruz, the occasion for more than ordinary imperial demonstration. She evidently swings it in expanded peacock feather style. At the depot she entered a gilded carriage that looked like a first class band chariot attached to a traveling circus troupe. As soon as she was seated the horses were removed, and an attempt was made to have the carriage drawn by the people. This part of the programme, however, proved to be a failure, the people lacking the enthusiasm or the servility necessary to move large bodies by popular propulsion. So the horses were again put in and her Majesty had to be contented with the means employed by common mortals for getting about the world. The Empress, by the way, is said to be a very romantic personage, given to pageant and measuring her rank among the sovereigns of the world by the style of her turnout, and the quantity of pyrotechnics that announce her arrivals and departures. Her vanity is, perhaps, harmless in its manifestations, and it saves her from a realizing sense of the "perilous edge of things" to which her husband's imperial fabric is exposed.

Gold from an Oil Well.—No small degree of excitement has recently been created in Western Pennsylvania, by the fact that gold bearing quartz has been struck in several oil wells, which were recently being sunk near Meadow Run, in Greene county. Several very rich specimens of quartz from one of the wells, brought up from the depth of five hundred and fifty feet, have been exhibited to the editor of the Pittsburg Commercial, and a barrel of borings from the same well have been sent to the United States Mint at Philadelphia, for scientific examination and assay. The same vein of quartz has been struck in two or three other neighboring wells; and much excitement has been produced in the neighborhood, owners of land there holding them at fabulous prices, much in advance of their value as oil lands.

Mrs. Foote, mother of Aristophanes, experienced the caprices of fortune, nearly as much as her son. The following laconic letters passed between them—"Dear Sam, I am in prison." Answer: "Dear mother, so am I."

Launch of the "49"

Editor Oregonian:

By the pale flickering light of a few candles and fitful glimpses of the northern star, the steamboat Forty Nine, Capt White was launched at the old Hawkins Barracks on the evening of the 18th November. Which [illegible], the military commander of Fort Colvile, with a number of others were present at the launch. As she slid into the Columbia [illegible] her left broadside there was a strong [illegible] gale blowing from the north north west [illegible] of the spectators yet those hardy ones [illegible] gave the brave little vessel two hearty cheers which [illegible] by the [illegible] and reverberated through the Colville hills sounding the glad tidings that [illegible] the silent waters of the upper Columbia [illegible] be made useful by the aid of steam in conveying the precious freights from her inexhaustible [illegible]. She was now fairly and squarely afloat and nearer the base of the celebrated Mount Hooker by three hundred miles of the course of the Columbia than any craft propelled by steam ever attained.

Shortly before the launch, two riders [illegible] the bank of the river, eyeing the boat. One of these was a medium sized savage of more than ordinary [illegible] and was riding a beautiful elk colored horse. He was the great red orator of Oregon fame, called the "Eagle from the Light," which truly interpreted is the "Eagle of the Dawn." The other rider was a fleshless son of Scotland, riding the celebrated Rocky Mountain [illegible] which in his day performed the extraordinary feat of overtaking in one severe heat, five red elk in succession, which were killed by his rider on the mountainous plains of Beaver Head.

A few days after the launching of the Forty Nine she steamed down to the old landing place of the Hudson Bay Company in front of Fort Colvile. Her deck was crowded with miners, hunters and farmers, Celestials, Indians and Jews. Upon the steamer appearing in sight of [illegible] Fort and hearing of her whistle, the officer in charge ordered the old Union Jack to be run up, and then out of a bull dog shaped brazen piece of ordnance [illegible] said to have been at the Heights of Abraham, three rounds filled to its muzzle were fired in salutation of the vessel.

After breaking and draining a few bottles of old Cognac and Jamaica by the people of the boat and the Fort, the vessel started up the river on her trial trip, which she performed with skill and power, turning back only at 28° below zero, and at the upper end of the Lower Columbia Arrow Lake, and had it not been for the intensely cold weather the Rapid de Mort alone would have stopped this haughty little thing, though she is as large as the Colonel Wright.

Appearance of the Sun from the North Pole.—To a person standing at the north pole the sun appears to sweep horizontally around the sky every twenty four hours, without any perceptible variation during its circuit in its distance from the horizon. On the 21st of June it is twenty-three degrees twenty eight minutes above the horizon, a little more than one fourth of the distance to the zenith, the highest point that it ever reaches. From this altitude it slowly descends, its track being represented by a spiral or screw with a very fine thread, and in the course of three months its worms its way down to the horizon, which it reaches on the 21st of September. On this day it slowly sweeps around the sky with its face half hidden below the icy sea. It still continues to descend, and after it has entirely disappeared it is still so near the horizon that it carries a bright twilight around the heavens in its daily circuit. As the sun sinks lower and lower, this twilight gradually grows fainter, till it fades away. On the 20th of December the sun is twenty-three degrees twenty-eight minutes below the horizon, and this is the midnight of the dark winter of the pole. From this date the sun begins to ascend, and after a time his return is heralded by a faint dawn which circles around the horizon, completing its circuit every twenty four hours. This dawn grows gradually brighter, and on the 20th of March the peaks of ice are gilded with the first rays of the six months' day. The bringer of this long day continues to wind his spiral way upward, till he reaches his highest place on the 21st of June, and his annual course is completed.—Scientific American.

Sir Fletcher Norton was noted for his want of courtesy. When pleading before Lord Mansfield, on some question of manorial right, he chanced to say "My lord, I can illustrate the point in an instant, in my own person. I myself, have two little manors." The judge immediately interposed, with one of his blandest smiles "We all know it, Sir Fletcher."

To Heads of Families.—Why do you allow your children to suffer, languish and die, when by a timely use of Newell's Pulmonary Syrup, those apparently trivial symptoms that precede all serious affections of the lungs and chest, especially "Croup" and "Whooping Cough," can be speedily and certainly relieved; thus saving yourselves much anxiety and many sleepless nights, and your little ones a world of suffering. Take the advice of one who knows, and keep the "Syrup" always on hand.

Throat Diseases.—"We would call attention to 'Brown's Bronchial Troches.' We have found them efficacious in allaying Irritation of the Throat and Bronchia, and would commend them to the attention of Public Speakers and others troubled with affections of the Throat. When You're Down

What legions of friends always bless us
When golden success lights our way!
How they smile as they softly address us,
So cordial, good humored and gay!
But ah! when the sun of prosperity
Hath set, then how quickly they frown,
And cry out in tones of severity
"Kick the man, don't you see he is down!"

What though, when you knew not a sorrow
Your heart was as open as day,
And your friends when they wanted to borrow
You obliged and never asked them to "pay"
What though not a soul you ever slighted,
As you wandered about through the town,
Your friends become very near sighted
And don't seem to see when you're down

When you're up you are loudly exalted
And traders all sing out your praise
When you're down you have greatly defaulted
And they really don't fancy your ways!
Your style was "tip top" while you'd money,
So sings ever sucker and clown
But now 'tis exceedingly funny—
Things are altered because you're down!

Oh give me the heart that forever
Is free from this world's selfish rust,
And the soul whose high noble endeavor
Is to raise fallen man from the dust;
And when in adversity's ocean
A victim is likely to drown
All hail to the friends whose devotion
Will lift up a man when he's down!

A Guerrilla's Diary.

The cold blooded atrocity and fiendish practices of the Border-State guerrillas during the rebellion can only be appreciated by those who have resided near the scenes of their outrages, or have been subjected to their barbarous treatment At the commencement of the war Missouri, then wavering in the balance between loyalty and rebellion offered a magnificent field of operations for enterprising marauders She had not long to wait for their appearance and Quantrell, Bill Anderson, Thrailkill, Joe Hart, and a score of others soon wrote their names in letters of blood on nearly every acre of her soil

A short time since a pocket Diary, formerly belonging to and kept by the notorious Joe Hart, fell into my possession, from which I propose making a few extracts, which I trust may prove interesting Of the authenticity of this Diary there can be no doubt, as it was taken from the dead body of the grim guerrilla It was subsequently identified by one of his men before a court-martial and certain extracts from it admitted as evidence It is a well worn book, having printed headings for each day in the year, containing a "calendar" and "list of Sundays in 1863." Its leaves are crumpled and soiled, and their edges stained with the blood of him who wrote the story of murder and robbery which it tells. On the first page is recorded, in a clear but rather delicate handwriting, the name of "Joseph L. Hart, Captain Partisan Rangers, of Savannah, Andrew County Missouri, formerly of Bardstown, Nelson county, Kentucky." All the entries, one on each day of the year, were written by the same hand, resembling more the penmanship of a lady than of one accustomed to the use of sabre and pistol On the second page, under date of January 9, 1863, are the following lines, which I copy verbatim

"REMEMBRANCE.
"Frank I can not forget
You I love you to well
Your smile is [illegible]
Your whispers a spell
You haven't [illegible]
I worship you yet
Our idle endearment
I can not forget."

This interesting effusion is signed "Miss M Lou Claybrook, Clay County, Missouri," and the name of that poetical young damsel appears more than once upon the pages of the Diary. While the gentle guerrilla was indulging in his "idle endearments" the literary Miss Lou diverted herself with his memorandum book, leaving therein those little traces of affection and false orthography which should recall her to his mind when he should be far away in the performance of these diabolical deeds, the telling of which made his "whispers a spell."

On the next page are two lines of a poem which the jolly Joseph had commenced, for he was a man of sentiment, and indulged in poetic fancies—and has reference, no doubt, to the military operations then being prosecuted in his native State, Kentucky:

"The land of my home is flitting,
Flitting from my view—"

If Joseph were now alive to complete the poem, he would probably admit that Kentucky hasn't "flitted so much as she might have done.

The entry for the 13th of April—at which time Joseph was gathering together his clan—records that they "run into the militia and fired a few shots—B. Wood and W. Gough were along." The "B. Wood" here alluded to is not the brother of Fernando the First, who has acquired considerable notoriety in similar company. Joseph proceeds, with his company of cut-throats, to the vicinity of "Rochester, Andrew county—layed over all day—very warm—a pleasant breeze is blowing up from the Sunny South—night comes on apace, throwing her sable mantle o'er the scene, and I am preparing to start for Huckleberry Ridge."

It is a fault in our guerrilla's style of composition that he allows his fancy to descend too abruptly from the poetic to the practical. On Friday, May 1, he sunned himself by the light of his sweetheart's eyes, and records the event as follows:

"I am with Calvert, Saunder and Price, at their stopping place. Sent for my little sweetheart, Miss A. V. Kinnison. Virdie came, God bless her little soul, and we passed a pleasant day together. When last I saw her it was the 19th of January, 1862, at Rysville. Night has come on, and I am going down to the neighborhood of St Joseph, where there are said to be some good horses, which we need. This has been a pleasant day, and the happiest so far of my life."

The fickleness of man is proverbial, and the entry made in Joseph's Diary on the following day shows that he was not free from that pleasant vice, and leaves the impression that he has only been trifling with the affections of his dear "Virdie." He says:

"Layed over all day near St. Joseph—saw many friends, but got no horses the d—d militia had been there before me I have been reading Washington Irving's works, and among them one entitled "The Broken Heart," which has caused me to determine never to [illegible] any more My little sweetheart shall not have cause to complain of me."

The "Broken Heart" evidently made a deep impression upon the susceptible Bushwhacker; for after reading it he returned to his "Virdie," and thus breathes forth his soul's ecstasy

"I am [illegible] in company with my dearest sweetheart, and time is fast fleeting away on Golden Wings o'er me and her whom I love best of all on Earth. To-day is a pleasant day, and the usual stillness of the Holy Sabbath is plainly to be noticed Nothing breaks its Heavenly stillness except the soft rustling of the young leaves and the mournful cooing of the Turtle Dove, aided by the cheerful notes of many other birds. 'Tis evening now, and my heart is filled with sadness to think that I and my girl must soon part, and perhaps forever Still later, and 'tis midnight—Holy Hour! All the world is wrapped in dream and sleep, but I am still sitting by my Virdie's side my arm is softly stolen around her slender waist—softly I press her to my beating Heart, and one, two, three, yes, half a dozen sweet kisses I steal from her pouting lips, and three o'clock is here! We part! Oh, shall I ever forget this Hour! Shall I ever forget the glance of that dark Eye! the sweet, mournful smile of that Fair Face! the soft thrilling pressure of that Little Hand! the sweet magic of Her Kisses! never! no never! Rather let my right hand forget its cunning—my eye its correctness of vision—or my tongue its Truthfulness! We have parted, and I am lonely, heart-sick, and weary of Life It rained hard to day, and the roads are muddy"

Joseph's sudden fall from a state of bliss to the muddy roads must be excused on the ground of "eccentricity of genius" But if our sentimental guerrilla can never forget his sweet-heart he certainly does not permit his love affairs to interfere with business He has written that at 3 o'clock that morning, before the "sweet smile" could have departed from that "fair face"—ere his "half a dozen" burning kisses could have cooled upon the "pouting lips" of his "little sweetheart," he was "again in the saddle and moving toward Logan Dysart's of North Prairie Raised a Dragoon pistol to-day Am on my way to Judge Ish's neighborhood" Which last remark bodes no good to Judge Ish or his neighborhood for Joseph is accompanied by his trusty squires, Calvert Price and Saunders, all ripe for pillage and plunder The manner in which in the above extract a pistol is spoken of as having been 'raised' is light and trifling, but in the Bushwhacker's lexicon the definition of the word 'raised' is given as meeting a fellow in the road, and after putting a few bullets through him "raising" his personal effects to the dignity of being worn by their captor On the following day Joseph "raised two Colt's revolvers a horse, and $50 in greenbacks also made the acquaintance of Miss Kate Rupe, a lovely girl, with whom I passed the entire day very pleasantly"

Perhaps if "Virdie" had known where her fickle Joseph was, her day would not have been so pleasant Alas! that "The Broken Heart" should be so soon forgotten! But Joseph having once transgressed his virtuous resolution seems determined to have a good time for it is written that he is "still at Atchison camped in the brush—it is a pleasant day, and I have been visited by Miss R, Miss E Miss B and Dr B They brought some good old Bourbon and we had a jolly time I think Miss R was particularly well pleased with me She is a lovely girl with true Southern principles Left to night for Possum Walk—was halted by the Feds—after talking a few minutes they allowed me to pass on."

On the 10th of May he was at Honey Creek with C S and P rained all day—Feds murdered Jeff Miller

Again he says "am in the neighborhood of Logan Dysart's—Feds run us out of our camp at 3 o'clock in the morning and stole my horse and two others—am going to the neighborhood of St Joseph—Feds murdered Ed O Burns to day"

His manner of speaking, of the death of the two persons mentioned above would lead one to suppose that they were estimable citizens who had been most foully dealt with by our troops The truth is they were members of the innocent Joseph's guerrilla gang and were killed in a skirmish at the time the camp was attacked The loss of his horse was an annoyance to Joseph for which some Union man must compensate He says next day our camp was discovered by a citizen—found out from him that he had a navy pistol at home—went at night and took it—also one horse—went after Jeff Rose's pistol and horse, but he escaped across Platte River

The heart of man ever yearns for the things that it has loved So Joseph returned to his Virdie on the next "Holy Sabbath" that he found in his calendar He says "I spent a pleasant day with my sweetheart and left her sorrowfully She looked so mournfully sweet and kissed me with such tenderness that a lowering gloom has fallen upon my soul A pleasant breeze is sighing through the trees this lovely evening and all nature looks charming Had a difficulty with a citizen to day about a horse—it is a fine animal and will carry me well"

If we refer once more to the bushwhacker's dictionary we shall find that the word "difficulty" signifies "killing,"—and reading the sentence by this light, we find that our romantic guerrilla met a citizen riding a good horse and blew the man's brains out to get possession of the animal Having traveled two days and made the acquaintance of Miss Sallie Ford and Miss Candor very pleasant Southern girls, on whom I can rely for assistance, he finally reached Richfield in time for the fight in which Seldons was killed—paroled A—, W—, & L—, captured a fine large spy glass to-day"

While thus dallying between love and murder Joseph was making additions to his band, and preparing for some expedition worthy of his genius On the 20th, having everything in readiness he says, "I marched for the vicinity of Plattsburg and reached it shortly after dusk Layed over till 3 o'clock in the morning and then marched on Plattsburg—captured the town, and paroled Colonel Charles Porter, Colonel James H Birch jr and Yiinly Destroyed a hundred stand of Government arms and burned $10,000 worth of Defense Warrants Left after dark—captured two horses and saddles—lost a horse wounded in the fight—destroyed Printing press and office—recruited one man"

A day or two after this, the Diary says, he "went with three men to Carpenter's store in Clinton and got supper—was fired at by Carpenter and a visitor—and returned their fire—nobody hurt on our side—don't know about the other—sold dragoon pistol for $50—captured a horse—turns out that Carpenter was mortally wounded and is dead Next day went on a scout with four men—captured 1 overcoat, 2 blankets, 2 horses, 1 saddle, 1 double barreled shot gun, 1 rifle and paroled two prisoners—exchanged a few shots with a company of Militia—a very good Sabbath day's work"

That reverses will occur in the bushwhacking business, as well as in gold speculations or other occupations more honest in their nature, is exemplified in Joseph's career He has entered in his Diary that "on Monday went with Captain Scott to see if the skiff was at the river—while on the river was fired at about fifty times by the Feds, but escaped to camp untouched. Went down opposite Sibley, and on returning run into the Fed infantry, and received one shot through the rim of my hat, one across the shoulder of my coat and one bruised my head a little, just back of my ear—my partner's horse was shot through the leg While I was gone to Sibley my [illegible] was driven out of camp by the Feds, numbering four to one—I am not yet separated from [illegible] we lost several horses and some arms"

He finally finds his scattered lambs and determines to seek, on the opposite side of the river, a more lucrative and less dangerous field of operations. The whistle of bullets is not pleasant to the ears of Joseph, and he prefers to steal his horses in a country where gunpowder is comparatively unknown. So he "marched to the river, but found it so well guarded that we could not get across—marched thirty miles to another crossing before daylight. Built a raft of logs and rails and seven of us crossed upon it Swam our horses in and lost three of them—the others swam to the Jackson county shore"

On the following day he met several more ladies with Southern sympathies, and a furious flirtation was the result, whereby Joseph again got separated from his gory companions. This was the less to be regretted, however, as it was the occasion of his meeting with Colonel Parker, C S A The Colonel was recruiting for the rebel army, and the result of this interview was that Joseph "was recommissioned by the Confederate authorities, and vested with authority to commission five recruiting officers, and offer special inducements to obtain recruits."

For the ensuing two weeks the Diary contains but little of interest. Our gay guerrillas spent their time flirting with their lady friends, stealing an occasional horse, and foraging upon loyal citizens. He eventually crossed the river again, and says:

"We were followed by about 50 militia, and on account of Henry Brown's actions we were discovered, and after skirmishing a little while were forced to run I lost my horse, saddle, and clothes, and some goods I had got for a new uniform, but I had the satisfaction of killing the officer in command of the militia Got separated from the company, and pressed a horse from a sympathizer Ran into the militia a second time but got away. Changed horses again"

Joseph was remarkably good at a horse trade, especially when the other fellow didn't have any weapon While in Andrew county he "left camp and went to my own neighborhood but Fed troops were guarding my house Didn't see my sister nor any one belonging to my family Sent a friend to town for $20 worth of goods Feds got after me, and I took the brush and got away"

Returning to the vicinity of Sibley he had a fight with the Feds, losing his old friend, Colonel Parker, whom he disposes of in this summary manner

"Colonel B F Parker was killed by the Feds to-day M'Farren's regiment did it Got supper at A Riley's, passing ourselves off as militia"

The remainder of the diary is filled up with similar memoranda, clearly setting forth their daily pillage, robbery and brutality, now and then hinting at offenses of greater magnitude, but never openly confessing to murder and arson The latter crimes were, however, as familiar to them as petit larceny. Joseph delighted in annoying the militia, and often chuckles with satisfaction at his success Of the "Feds," or regularly organized troops, he had a wholesome horror, and on meeting them would incontinently take to the brush His career was marked with flame, blood and cowardice, and he finally met the just doom of a cowardly murderer He died a lingering death upon the field where he was mortally wounded with his back to the foe while trying to run away from an inferior force Missouri is now free from these marauding freebooters, but years must elapse ere she can recover from the depredations committed by them That the Confederate authorities sanctioned and encouraged this guerilla warfare constitutes one of the most heinous offenses that can be laid to the charge of those insane leaders But, thank God, peace reigns again, and thrift and plenty will return once more to this fair State

Some Significant Facts.—The remarkable business prosperity that prevailed throughout the North during the war is well understood but the fact is not generally known that this country did more to feed Europe during the years of 1862, 1863, and 1864 than in three years next preceding the outbreak of the war In compiling the statistics relating to exports in the Treasury Department it has been discovered that the shipments of wheat, ham and bacon to Europe during the three years in the midst of the war was greatly in excess of previous exports The quantity of wheat shipped was two and three-fourths times greater than in the same length of time just before the war, while the amount of ham and bacon was increased eight times This is a remarkable exhibit when it is remembered that during the three years of war referred to we had an average of one million of men in the army whose producing capacity was lost to the country No wonder that all the wise predictions of European [illegible] result of the rebellion proved fallacious A nation that can carry on the most stupendous war [illegible] prosper meanwhile and greatly increase its exports of provisions is beyond the pale of ordinary calculation —New York Times

The Red Sea.—The name of the Red Sea is derived from large portions being covered with patches from a few yards to some miles square composed of microscopic vegetable animalcule particularly abundant in spring and which dye the water an intensely blood red When not affected by those organic beings, the deep waters are intensely blue, and the shoal waters shades of green

The Bee says A large deposit of agates jasper and opals have been found on the banks of the Sacramento river just above the wharf at Martinez Among these stones is a large and really beautiful moss agate apparently equal in delicacy and beauty to the famous Oriental stones of this description which are so highly prized in Europe This stone is valued at a very high figure

A VALUABLE WATER POWER For Sale.

THE SUBSCRIBER OFFERS FOR SALE A VALUABLE WATER POWER that can be worked on the Willamette Slough, three-quarters of a mile south of St Helens, at the town of Milton, generally known as the Water Power originally worked by T H Smith, a short distance back from the river. This Valuable Water Power can be conveyed to the bank of the river, with some 25 or 30 feet fall The river bank is rock. The above site is at the head of the natural harbor of St. Helens, which has water sufficient for the largest class vessel in the trade to discharge or receive her cargo, and is entirely free of ice, drift or flood The ground over which the trunk would have to be built is well adapted to the same, with inexhaustible stone quarries on the ground As to the amount of water, the above Smith has run two sawmills abreast with less than half the head that can be had at the river. The subscriber is living on the premises, and will take pleasure in giving any gentleman all the information that may be desired, and can give a good title to the above premises Address

THE STANDARD AMERICAN BILLIARD TABLES!

AND COMBINATION CUSHIONS

MESSRS. PHELAN & COLLENDER

WOULD RESPECTFULLY CALL THE ATTENTION of persons wanting Billiard Tables to the great superiority of the above tables manufactured exclusively at their establishment.

At the Billiard Congress of 1863, composed of all the first class players of America, it was unanimously resolved that tables of our manufacture should be used at all matches for the Championship, as the best and only reliable tables

These Billiard Tables have received the unqualified approval of the best players and most competent judges, who have universally pronounced them unequaled for general excellence and durability.

Seven distinct patents for improvements in Billiard Tables have been granted to us by the United States Patent Office, and we have lately obtained a Patent from the French Government for our improvement in Billiard Cushions

We employ in the construction of our tables, a variety of machines specially made for the purpose by means of which we are enabled to insure a scientific and mechanical accuracy hitherto unknown in Billiard manufacture.

Having a long experience and thorough knowledge of all the appliances of Billiards, and constantly on hand a large stock of the best and most thoroughly seasoned materials, we are prepared to furnish everything required in the Billiard line with unprecedented dispatch

The eminent French Billiard Player, M. Berger, has published the following opinion:

"New York, 26 August, 1861

"On the eve of leaving the United States, I am happy to declare to all amateurs of Billiards that after a tour of eleven months through the principal cities, I have been enabled to judge in a satisfactory manner of the superiority of the Billiard Tables manufactured by Phelan & Collender The system of manufacturing is so superior, that I am happy to introduce their style of cushion into France. They have united to their manufacture of American Billiard Tables that of the French Tables, of remarkable excellence and beauty For these reasons I am happy to make this declaration.

"BERGER, CLAUDIUS,
Prof of Billiards, Paris"

Parties ordering from us will find our prices as low as good work can possibly be made for. We sell first-class articles at a fair price, and will not make an inferior article at any price

Orders by mail carefully and promptly executed. Illustrated Catalogues and Price Lists sent by mail. The Billiard Cue," a journal published in the interest of Billiards, and containing details of all novelties, a copious record of Billiard news, and everything of interest to amateurs of Billiards, sent free on application.

ALLEN'S LUNG BALSAM!

The Remedy for Curing
CONSUMPTION, COUGHS, COLDS,
ASTHMA, CROUP,
Diseases of the Throat, Bronchitis, Pains and Oppression of the Chest and Lungs, Difficult Breathing and all the Diseases of the Pulmonary Organs.

ITS ACTION IS EXPECTORANT, ALTERATIVE, SUDORIFIC, SEDATIVE, DIAPHORETIC AND DIURETIC, which renders it one of the most valuable remedies known for curing diseases of the lungs. It excites expectoration, and causes the lungs to throw off the phlegm or mucus; CHANGES THE SECRETIONS AND PURIFIES THE BLOOD; heals the irritated parts; gives strength to the digestive organs; brings the liver to its proper action, and imparts strength to the whole system. Such is the immediate and satisfactory effect, that it is WARRANTED TO BREAK UP THE MOST DISTRESSING COUGH IN A FEW HOURS' TIME, if not of too long standing. IT IS WARRANTED to give entire satisfaction even in the MOST CONFIRMED CASES OF CONSUMPTION! IT IS WARRANTED NOT to produce costiveness (which is the case with most remedies) or affect the head, as it contains no Opium in any form. IT IS WARRANTED TO BE PERFECTLY HARMLESS to the most delicate child, although it is an active and powerful remedy for restoring the system. THERE IS NO REAL NECESSITY FOR SO MANY DEATHS BY CONSUMPTION, when ALLEN'S LUNG BALSAM will prevent it, if only taken in time.
Sold by all Druggists. Price $1 per bottle.
